Ruminations

I suppose I must confess that I have become somewhat of a fair weather person. I concluded last October that this was not the year of the Stanley Cup returning to its rightful home in Toronto. Baseball is too slow a game to keep my attention, so unless it is the World Series involving the Blue Javs, I need to be pretty desperate to watch it. I can die happy without ever going to the Skydome or whatever it is called now. As the American College sports is in the midst of the throws of March Madness basketball (a sport which has far too many whistles and fouls) I only watch the Catholic universities and once they are out, well... and let's face it, my alma mater Notre Dame didn't even make it this year. This means that they didn't even crack the top 68 universities, behind teams with such names as the Paladins, or the Frogs, or Terrapins - it's a turtle, and the Fighting Irish couldn't beat a turtle? It is almost like an Aesop's fable. Anyway, it is unfortunate that this fair weather attitude has infiltrated my walking routine. There was a time when I would walk a certain route almost every night, unless the weather was exceedingly harsh. I would love walking in snow storms and rain, on windy nights and in cold. I'm not sure if it was a sense of bravado or defiance, or just enjoying the challenge – likely a bit of it all. Especially during the lockdowns of Covid, it was certainly a spirit of un-conquerability. Since all the restrictions have been lifted, my motivation has waned. It has been months since I went out for an invigorating walk. I would start to get dressed for an outing and then see the flags flapping in the breeze and figured the wind-chill was too much. Or if we had a recent snowfall, I surmised that the roadways (I walk on the road, not the sidewalk as they sidewalks with their uneven piece have been the cause of several bloody scraps and falls) may be too icy and treacherous. Or an episode of Blue Bloods comes on which I haven't seen, or I just didn't feel like it which is more the case. Well, in the first hours of Spring officially arriving I decided it was time to overcome the apathy and lethargy and get outside. It was a repeat episode of Blue Bloods so I had no real excused. There was no wind to speak of and the thermometer was reading above zero. I had no meetings or appointments. Out the door I went embarking on my 45 minute hike. Other than the throngs of people who attend daily Bingo, there is little traffic in the industrial area behind the church. With my fixation with numbers, there was a time when I would count and record the number of cars that would pass me. So this first day back, there was a car speeding by who abruptly slowed down and stopped ahead of me. All kinds of things go through one's mind – do I know them; am I going to be kidnapped, is it a disgruntled Habs' fan seeking revenge? I cautiously approach him on the other side of the road, just in case. In my finest posture of strength, I kept my eyes straight ahead, trying my best to ignore him and portraying an air of nonchalance. As I was passing him he rolled down the window and asked, "Hey buddy, you out for a refreshing walk?" I replied yes and told him I needed to lose a few. I had a bulky winter coat on so he had no idea that it was really more than a few. He then said, "Good on you, I was just looking to see if you needed a ride." I was both pleased and relieved. But then I realized, I must have looked like a wearied straggler dragging his sorry butt down the street, rather than a seasoned walker out for the health of it. I think I need to keep walking more, but thanks buddy, that was a kind offer, even if he did have a Canadians bumper sticker. I called it my walk of lame.

Announcements and Events...

Soup & a Series "The Chosen'

The Chosen is a series now preparing for its fourth season. It depicts the life of Jesus with his apostles. It is a very intriguing and down to earth vision of what the interactions may have looked like without a typical overly pious, saccharinely approach. It will inspire, and inform and enlighten and challenge you. We have decided to offer it during Lent as our Soup and a Movie. Each week we will show two episodes from Season I. Show will start at 12 noon and since the episodes are usually less than an hour in length, be finished by 2 pm. There is no cost, though donations to help defray the cost of the soup and buns is always appreciated. Please join us for this great journey of the greatest story.

Thursdays during Lent 12:00 noon to 2:00 pm starting Thursday, March 2, 2023 and ending March 30th

ShareLife

ShareLife Time is almost upon us. Its origin as a specifically Catholic Charity started in 1976 as a response to its Prolife stance. The primary charitable organization that was funding many of the charities at the time was the United Way. As the United Way supported organizations promoting abortion, the Archdiocese decided to deliberately separate itself from the Toronto United Way. ShareLife was started to support organization which promoted Catholic values. To date, ShareLife supports over forty organizations serving: Families, Immigrants & Refugees, People with Special Needs, Seniors, Young Parents, Children & Youth, International Development & Missions, Vocations, and a whole host of others. In our support of ShareLife, the Church works through us, and we become part of the outreach of the Church to those in need.

The Mission of ShareLife is:

By supporting agencies that serve those who are poor, vulnerable and marginalized, and that operate in line with the values of our faith, you bring the hands of Christ to people in need.

The First Full Moon of Spring

The first full moon of Spring this year is Wednesday, April 5. This determines the date of Easter. The Sunday directly following this first full moon (liturgically called the Paschal Full Moon) is Easter Sunday.

Breaking In A New Bishop

On Saturday, March 25, 2023, a new Bishop was installed as the Archbishop for the Archdiocese of Toronto. Bishop Francis Leo will be elevated to Archbishop & installed as the Archbishop for the Archdiocese of Toronto.

Every diocese has a bishop as its leader. Some dioceses are historically significant and the 'mother' diocese as new dioceses are formed from the 'mother' diocese. These 'mother' dioceses are elevated to the rank of an Archdiocese. Toronto is the largest English speaking diocese in Canada. It has also 'birthed' other diocese around it.

In 1842, Toronto itself was subdivided from the first English speaking diocese of Kingston. Later, the diocese of London, Peterborough, St. Catharine's & Hamilton were subdivided off of Toronto.

The leader of an Archdiocese is always an Archbishop. Again, some of the more significant Archdioceses have the potential of having the Archdiocese elevated to the rank of a Cardinal. Toronto has had four Cardinals over its history. Cardinal James McGuigan was the first Cardinal here, back in 1946. He was followed by Archbishop Philip Pocock who was never elevated. He was followed by Cardinal Emmett Carter elevated on June 30, 1979. Cardinal Aloysius Ambrozic was his successor and he was elevated to Cardinal on February 18, 1998. Upon his retirement, Thomas Collins took over and he was elevated to Cardinal on February 11, 2006. Who knows whether or not our new Archbishop will be so honoured. It is kind of the expectation.

Because the Archdiocese of Toronto is rather large, there are four Auxiliary Bishops to help with the scope of work. These Bishops serve various regions. Our regional Bishop is Bishop John Boissonneau. The others are Bishops Robert Kasan, Ivan Camilleri,& Vincent Nguyen.

Lent

The fifth Sunday of Lent holds a unique position. On the one hand, it is the last Gospel before everything switches into an immediate anticipation of Easter and the celebrations of the Resurrection. The following Sunday begins Holy Week and we begin with a commemoration of the entry of Jesus into Jerusalem.

In the regular cycle of the Lectionary, the year A gospel presents the story of the raising of Lazarus. As much as we may marvel at Lazarus coming back from the dead, the thrust of the story is much more than a prelude to what we hope awaits us.

We ask the Elect preparing for the sacraments of Initiation to reflect upon the things in their lives that reek of death. Just as Jesus instructed the family of Lazarus to remove all the bandages and wrappings of death, so are the Elect and we along with them, are called to discern everything in our lives that takes life away.

That speaks of the essence of our Lenten journey. It is an annual invitation look at our lives, but in a particular context—our lives in the midst of a society, as the lost Popes have described as a culture of death. It reminds us that sin is not just individual, but it is communal. We live in a society that is trying to make everything subjective—truth, beauty and ultimately reality. The individual becomes the center of the world, with little or no care for others or a common good.

It takes a bit of work to see how much the world influences our lives, our thoughts and outlooks. That is one of the reasons this season of Lent it called the Period of Purification & Enlightenment for those adults seeking Initiation. The title gives a hood hint as to the direction of our own Lenten journey. We are invited to Purify ourselves. This is more than merely calling to mind our sin, making a list and checking it twice. It is to discern what our authentic sin is—how is affects the Body of Christ—how it acts to keep God at bay how it makes us lesser than we are called to be - how it cheats us of the very gift of life God has bestowed on us. We are invited to be Enlightened with our baptism spirituality. This enlightenment is about striving to see the world through God's eyes—to see our relationships through God's eyes—to see our lives through God's eyes.

All these things serve to enwrap us in a mantle of death that weighs us down. As they act to deaden our spirit and our hope, as they act to blind us or dull our existential hopes, they insidiously blur our goal and our relationship with God. Too many Christians have failed to encounter the genuine love of God. Too many fear that the love of God is conditional—conditional on doing the right thing (which is not bad), or saying the right thing (again, a good thing to do), or saying our prayers rightly (still not a bad thing), or attending as many masses as possible (not a bad thing). None of these can make God love us any more or any less. The Paschal Mystery is God's definitive statement to us that we are loved—all of us, the saint and the sinner, the rich and the poor, the homeless and he drug addict, the alcoholic and the torturer, the oppressed and the oppressor. The challenge is for us to live lives congruent with our Enlightened knowledge of how much and how eternally we are loved by God.,
