Ruminations

I have never played the game whack-a-mole. I'm not sure I have ever seen a live game, maybe at the CNE, but I am certainly familiar with it – thank you 'The Price is Right'. It seems like it would be a very therapeutic activity, and you could even attach pictures of particular people you might want to whack on the head. I know I have a list of candidates, starting with weather reporters who forecast all this oppressive heat and humidity. I was at a burial last week and one of the staff who was filling in the cremated remains hole had a large Montreal Canadiens logo tattooed on his arm. I told him he was lucky the hole wasn't bigger because I was tempted. Well, he is on my list too. I kind of got caught up in a live game of whack-a-mole. In the southeast corner of the parking lot, there has been a groundhog taking up residence over the years. Some summers I see him, and some summers I don't. I am loathe to say he has returned, or more likely, she has returned because the last time, there was a young one that accompanied her. She had made her way up to the gardens by the Hall entrance and so I chased her to the dumpster shed, then with a jet stream of water, chased the varmint from there across the parking lot to her hole at the back. I was praying that my friendly neighbourhood hawk would swoop down and take care of business in the same way that he took care of the rabbit devouring my garden. NO such luck. There is never a hawk around when you need one. Anyway, I discovered that she has three holes all in close proximity to one another. I took my hose and started flooding the one hole. After about a minute, this wet mass of groundhog darted out of the one hole into the second hole. I started spraying the second hole and soon, she was darting into the third hole. I kind of thought of the three pigs and their hoses, but I was determined to do some urban renewal and make the area inhospitable. This hole seemed to be bigger but I persisted. Eventually I thought she must be ready to dart out of the hole. I wasn't sure if she would just return to one of the other two, but I thought my nearness would deter her. Now I wasn't thinking too much about any plans, though I did have visions of killer groundhogs turning on me to avenge their flooded homes. Just as I was a bit distracted and a bit bored, I saw a furry wet mess run out of the hole. It wasn't the big groundhog I was expecting, it was a little ground squirrel. Before I could even process this, there was a flash of black and white – a skunk came bounding out looking very confused and maybe a bit irate. Now I was confused and panicky thinking the skunk might lift its tail to defend its honour. Before I could react, the groundhog emerged as well, and I saw that they were heading somewhere, but I had dropped the hose and was heading in the opposite direction. I never did see where the three amigos went, and I'm not too sure if they returned to their menagerie or not. Truth be told, I haven't been back to check out the area since, though I have been googling ways in which to invite and encourage hawks to take up residence. Ah, Mother Nature, what a curious spectacle.

BETSY'S BOUTIQUE

The items sold at the Betsy's Boutique Booth are all made from the skills and talents of our very own St. Elizabeth Seton parishioners. If you are working on some homemade crafts this summer perhaps you can think about donating to our booth to help make it successful. We are looking for hand made items only - woodworking, paintings, preserves (jams, jellies, pickles, etc.) pottery, ceramics, sewing, etc. Whatever your talent is we would like to sell it from our booth. Please support your parish by sharing your talent. Contact Maureen Delaney at maureen.delaney@rogers.com.

We will publish our next Bulletin on line August 06, and then on August 27, September 03.
