Ruminations ...

I still remember the day when my dad took me outside and said that today was the day I was going to learn how to change a tire. Needless to say, fear and foreboding swept over me, but even in my panic I knew that this was probably a good thing to know. I certainly had my doubts about the success of this endeavour. I was in my mid-twenties and had been driving for almost a decade, and the necessity of such a skill had to date been unnecessary, so I mustered the courage, and dad mustered his patience, which was more needed than my courage, and we went out to conquer the beast. For the most part things went to script – I say for the most part, but the fact that my younger brother was spectating with a bemused smugness, since he was born changing tires, didn't help the situation. Anyway, I managed to stumble through, though I would be hard pressed to duplicate that feat today, but with a brother and nephew who would be at the ready, and even better, a CAA card, touch wood, I will never need to use any of them. I have always had this fear of all things mechanical or electrical, and I have never had one of those curious spirits that seeks to discover how things work. I figure all I need to know – all I want to know is how to plug it in and turn it on, whether it is cars, lawn mowers, computers, and the like. One thing that puts me on edge are the weed trimmers. There are too many parts and too many steps for my untechy brain. Pump this primer button, hold this handle, flip this switch and pull the string – as easy as it sounds on paper, in my head I hear the theme song from Jaws every time I approach it. And then, if I get it going, well, then, trying to advance the cutting string just bobbles my mind. A couple of years ago we needed to purchase a new one. This in itself is a stressful situation. As someone who had taken great pride in avoiding anything technical, the idea of needing to talk with someone who would ask me questions for which I had no familiarity with the lingo, was terrifying. It had to be done. I decided that instead of one of the anonymous big box stores where I could likely avoid those one-on-one discussions, I would try a more specialized store. I headed to Newmarket Mower Limited. It included something about mowing right in their name. I tried to pawn this task on my brother, but, alas, it fell to me. I sheepishly went in and metaphorically fell on my knees admitting that I know nothing about what we were going to talk about, but that I needed a simple to use 'weed whipper'. He politely corrected me saying 'you mean a trimmer'. I think he knew already that this was going to be an interesting sale. Suffice it to say that I purchased one and it worked great, until somehow I let the plastic cutting cord get lost in the cap. I could not open the cap to get inside. I looked through the manual, I searched on Google, I watched YouTube videos, and that 'trimmer' remained idle for a year and a half. Finally I conceded that I would need to go back to the store with my tail between my legs and beg for help. Off to Newmarket Mower Ltd again with the offending part in hand. I wore a baseball cap, and I kept my sunglasses on. I was incognito. Anyway, within 10 seconds he had it off and on the road to repair. He rewound the cord, and then in the nicest way possible explained how to advance the cord and when to advance the cord. It all seemed so simple, and he was so friendly. I think he lied to me when he said it happens all the time, but I must confess it did soothe the embarrassment just a bit. So, please admire the freshly trimmed edges because I'm not sure how long the trimmer will continue to work, not a defective machine, but user error.

Announcements and Events...

What is Canadian Food for Children?

Dr. Andrew and Joan Simone are the co founders of this Organization. After an encounter with Mother Teresa who specifically asked them to send food to the poor in Tanzania and Ethiopia, they were up and running. That was over 40 years ago. CFC is a registered charity with the Federal Government and continue to send food to 22 different countries. The Charity is based in Mississauga, and many parishes are involved in various capacities and further the Gospel work. In 2021, they shipped over 9 million pounds to countries in Africa, Central and South America, and the Caribbean. That represents 282 containers shipped.
