Ruminations

Autumn arrived Sunday at 8:44 am. It is supposed to be the autumnal equinox, that day when we have equal night and day. Because of the roundness of the earth, it doesn't quite work out that way. We affectionately refer to it as Fall, obviously connected to the falling of the leaves. I guess that only holds true to places with more than just a perpetual green season, and with deciduous trees. And it likely doesn't make much sense above the tree line. I'm thinking though, that perhaps it should be called more than Fall, something more like 'Crash', because that's how it seemed to arrive this year. One day was summer and the next day, autumn came crushing in. The gardens are giving detailed signs of the end of the season. The flowers are fading and looking very tired. We stopped fertilizing a couple of weeks ago and it shows. Some of the spent flowers look bone dry on their stems and I went out to cut them down, but on that morning, with my gloves, leaf bag, and Fiskars in hand, as I was approaching the garden, there was a flutter of birds perched upon the flowers feasting on the seeds. I still have not identified what kind of finches they were. I had never seen their type before and it was exciting to be providing food for them, that after the garden blooms had exhausted their summer glory, in their waning days they took on a whole new sense of beauty. Now they are a bit of an eye sore in the middle of the garden but for a couple of mornings now, the finches have been paying us a visit, and so I haven't had the heart to dispose of them. So if you pass by the gardens and think that I haven't had time to begin the autumn garden clean up, that is not the case. Despite the fact that I have lamented the presence of nature in my garden, the earwigs, Japanese beetles, snails, slugs, voles and groundhog, this little expression of Mother Nature is so welcome and edifying. It has given new meaning and purpose to the tasks of tending the garden every day. The time will come soon enough when all the plants will need to be cut back to prevent any diseases extending into the next season. It is amazing how many bags of leaves and stems that these little garden areas produce, the genius of creation. So as our autumn comes crashing in on us, and the days darken, and the sweaters start to come out, it does cause us to be thankful for the glorious summer blossoms, the long warm days, the fresh produce, and the relaxed attitudes of summer. And so as it is something we do every week, but in particular in a few weeks, we will gather together as a nation to thank God for the bounty and the beauty, of course the little birds that feast on our flowers, even if Autumn crashes in on us.

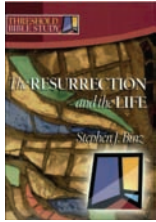

Fr. Roy

For those young people who are in at least Grade 2 are eligible to register for First Communion next Easter Season. Those young people in at least Grade 7 are eligible to enroll in preparations to celebrate Confirmation around Pentecost next Spring. Registration forms will be available starting the weekend of September 1st. The last date for registration is Sunday, September 29th after the 11:00 am Mass.
