Ministry of Presence

Sometimes people with illness become isolated and alone, and estranged from the community and the sacraments. This Ministry provides that essential connection between our Communal Worship and those physically unable to be present by visiting and bringing Communion to the homebound.

If anyone would like a visit from members of the Ministry of Presence please contact the parish office.

It was such a blast to have Dr. Massimo Faggioli here this past weekend. His presentation on the history and spirituality on the Second Vatican Council was extraordinary and something every Catholic should hear. I wish he had taught at the Seminary because it was so life –giving and informative. And the in between times of escorting him from here to there, and dining with him was certainly a highlight of my academic pursuits. There was a friend of his in Toronto whom he wanted to connect with so we made arrangements for him to visit her. She is a fellow academic with a doctorate in Church ecclesiology and she was the ambassador to the Vatican representing the country of Georgia. She wanted to come to Vespers and hear his talk so I arranged to pick her up on Sunday afternoon. I knew where she lived because I had picked Massimo the night before from there. I was going to scoot down and be back before dinner was served at 5 pm. Dr. Tamara was going to join us for the meal, or so I thought. As I was cruising down the 404 signs began to indicate that the Don Valley Parkway was closed. Now I was scheduled to pick her up at 3:30 essentially at Bay and Bloor. The only way I have ever got there is via the DVP. As I turned onto the 401 wondering how to get there in a timely fashion, I soon discovered that there was no timely fashion. One of the joys of living outside of Toronto is not having to travel in and about Toronto, in fact I have bragged about not knowing much about Toronto streets and neighbourhoods, which all came to the fore trying to make it down to mid-town. Stop and go doesn't quite describe the rhythm of the drive, and driving down what seemed like back alleys to get to Bay street put fear in the heart of a country bumpkin. Anyway, I picked her up about 25 minutes late. That was nothing compared to getting back home. I had called my brother and he suggested getting onto the Gardiner Expressway. That meant navigating all the roads and lights down by the Skydome just as the Blue Jay game was letting out. There were people everywhere going in all kinds of directions. It was impossible to get to the Gardiner so Google Navigation that Dr. Tamara had on her phone directed us up Bathurst. Eventually we hit the 401 and made it to the 404. Finally after 2 hours of city pandemonium, we were making good time. The guests in the rectory called to see where we were and I told them ten minutes away. Well that was just before the accident at the 404 and St. John's Road overpass. There were police and ambulances and firetrucks on both sides of the highway and everything was reduced to single lanes and lots of merging and stopping again. So when we finally reached home, everyone had eaten and we were two and a half hours overdue, but we made it in time for Vespers. Honestly I have no idea how people can do that day in and day out. I think I have a new appreciation for road rage. And thank God I don't live in Toronto. Newmarket rush hour is more than I can handle.

Thank you very much for making a difference in the lives of impoverished families around the world.
